

in SEM we work at a "black-and-white world" due to using single wavelength electron beam ("a type of boring").... so different of "false color" are widely used, such as below one... in the future lecture, you will see "false color" to be used in different way, e.g. "element distribution map"....

also you need to learn a little knowledge of imaging processing for EM work...

